Finally, I'll Be Happy

Boss: Congratulations. The mailroom job is yours?

Bob: Thank you sir! (Thinking sounds) With this job, I'll finally be happy with the money I'm making.

Announcer: The Bible says, "Whoever loves money never has enough."

Co-worker: I hear Dan is leaving management. Are you going to go for his job?

Bob: Supervisor? Oh, I don't know . . . (thinking sound) supervisor, a raise, I'd finally be happy with the money I'd be making. I could buy a bigger house.

Announcer: It says, "Whoever loves wealth is never satisfied with his income."

VP: Bob, I'm going to be retiring. I'd like for you to consider taking my place as Vice President.

Bob: Thank you Bill. I'll definitely think about it. (Thinking sounds) Wow! Vice President, a six-digit income, no more worries.

Announcer: Only with God can we have peace. Without Him, we will never be content.

Mailboy: Mail's here, sir.

Bob: Just set it over there on the table. (Thinking effect) Ah, the old mailroom... no decisions, no pressures, no hassles. If only I had a job like that . . .
