Kids Today

[door slam, car interior, gear shifts]

Friend: Hey, there's a new restaurant in town, how 'bout we eat there today?

Harold: Naw, they have too many kids working there.

Friend: What do you have against kids?

Harold: Ah, kids today, they're off in their own world with their headphones on...

Friend: There's a yellow light.

Harold: ..riding their skate boards all over the place,

Friend: Harold, yellow light.

Harold: ..playing their stupid video games,

Friend: RED LIGHT!! [screech, honk, horn passing]

Harold: ..totally oblivious to the world around them. You know what I mean?

Friend: Yeah. I know what you mean.

Harold: They don't have decent values anymore either.

Friend: Harold there's a crosswalk up there.

Harold: They just have no common courtesy.

Friend: Harold, people, in the crosswalk.

Harold: They simply show no respect for other people.

Friend: Look out. [screams, yelling, horn]

Harold: Hey! Get out of the road! Can't you see I'm driving here!

Announcer: When we focus on the sins of others, we often lose sight of our own need for God's forgiveness.

Harold: Kids today have no respect for the law.

Friend: [beep beep beep] What's that?

Harold: My radar detector. Guess I'd better put on my seat belt.

Announcer: The Bible states that everyone has sinned. Have you thought about your need for forgiveness? Or are you focusing on the sins of others?
