House on Fire

[adding machine]

Jensen: 7843, 4454...

Kirt: Hey Jensen, is that house on fire across the street?

Jensen: Uh yeah. 2599, 6738...

Kirt: I think there's people upstairs. Don't you think someone should tell them their house is on fire?

Jensen: Don't worry about it. Somebody else will tell them. 4329...

Kirt: What if they don't? You know, those people could die, you should tell them.

[adding machine out]

Jensen: Look it's five minutes before lunch. Last time I got to the cafeteria late the Swedish meatballs were gone, okay?

Kirt: Uh, let me get this straight: their house is on fire, and you're worried about Swedish meatballs?

Jensen: If you're so concerned, you tell them.

Kirt: Me? You're the one who took the communications class.

Jensen: What am I suppose to do? Run around, looking for all the burning houses in the world so I can tell people inside they're gonna die?

Kirt: I'm not talking about every burning house in the world, I'm one next door.

Jensen: Look I'm an accountant, not a fireman.

Kirt: Well, what does it take to tell them their house is on fire?

Jensen: Well, what makes you think they'd listen to me?

Kirt: Well, you could give them the option.

Announcer: People around us need Jesus. Do you care?
