Church Is Over, Let's Go Home

Pastor: And enjoy this beautiful Sunday afternoon. You're dismissed.

Husband: Wasn't that a great sermon?

Wife: Yeah. Come on let's go.

Husband: No. There's the Johnson's. Let's see how they're doing.

Wife: No. No. No. No. Let's go.

Husband: Why? Are we doing something this afternoon?

Wife: I just want to hear a sermon and go home. If we hang around too long, then somebody might ask us to do something.

Husband: Is that so bad?

Wife: I don't want to spend all day at church. I came, I listened, I sang. Now come on, let's go!

Husband: Dear, we are part of this body of believers. We should be doing something.

Wife: Can't we be part of the body but not a... functioning part of the body?

Husband: You mean like dandruff?

Wife: Yeah, no, that...no...

Husband: I just want to ask John if he found a job yet.

Wife: John's out of work?

Husband: Yeah, the last four months. He told me at the Men's breakfast last week.

Wife: How's Sarah taking it?

Husband: I'm not sure.

Wife: Oh I should talk to her.

Husband: I thought we just wanted to go home.

Wife: How can you think of bolting out of here when people need to be encouraged?

Husband: I didn't...

Wife: Sometime you just don't think.

Husband: Me?!

Wife: Oh shush.
